Notice To Advertisers.

THE ASTORIAN guarantees to its advertisers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia river.

What do you think, anyhow?

The Columbia sails for San Francisco to-day.

The Wm. H. Bease, Coos Bay and Alsea sailed yesterday.

Carl Adler brought up a large stock of fine goods on yesterday's steamer.

The American ship Chesborough and the American bark Pettengill are outside.

C. E. Van Horn, the general advance agent who is now in charge of the Rose Eyring combination is in the city.

Captain Worth, late master of the Unadilla, was committed for trial at Victoria, B. C., last Thursday, charged with the theft of $340 in gold.

John Rutter has been busy for some time in building a steam barge alongside the Aberdeen on the beach, the craft being successfully launched yesterday morning. She or it is named the Don and rides the fuming billows right handsomely.

W. J. Franklin, of Skippoon, one of the three men who voted in Clatsop county for St. John, on the 4th, thinks his vote for the prohibition candidate was a little the farthest west of any similar vote in the Union. Mr. Franklin has voted for forty years and says that he never yet has voted for the winning candidate.

The Queen of the Pacific, which has of late been a stranger in these waters, arrived in yesterday afternoon with freight and passengers from San Francisco. The British bark Beechdale, Jenkins master, 72 days from Valparaiso, arrived in. The Wm. H. Starbuck sailed for New York. The Bada and Kate and Anna also crossed out.

Miss Rose Eyring with a full dramatic company will appear at Occidental Hall in this city next Tuesday evening in the great play of "Felicity, or a woman's love" the great New York success. On Wednesday evening "Loah." Reserved seats at New York Novelty Store. Miss Eyring is an actress of acknowledged merit and deserves a large audience.

The Beechdale which arrived here yesterday, was on the way to San Francisco, but when in the offing of that port on the first inst., received orders to square away for the Columbia. The Ketchikan which showed up at San Francisco last Saturday received similar instructions. Pilot Latham reports that the Beechdale made the run from San Francisco in 48 hours, more than half the distance being made in the last 15 of the 48; that isn't bad going for a sailing vessel.

The tenders for the completion of the Oregon and California railroad were opened in London on the 22nd of October and the Oregon Construction Company of Portland (Messrs. D. P. Thompson and R. M. Steel) were the successful bidders. The contract, says the Oregonian, is let, is understood to embrace the complete building of equipment of the road except the rolling stock, and embraces also the keeping of the road in repair for one year after completion. It is understood the contract price is about $2,000,000.

Sooner or later the biggest of everything in the way of agricultural production in this vicinity finds its way to THE ASTORIAN office. Whether wheat or potatoes, turnips or strawberries, pumpkins or pippins, the returns come in with more certainty and satisfaction than those from New York. Yesterday John Matier brought in some specimens of what can be raised on Clatsop county tide land. They were beets, just plain beets, larger and rounder and redder than a torchlight procession at 3 A. M. The biggest beet of the lot weighs 22 pounds, and in all its native strength and solemn beauty is on exhibition at this office.

Y. M. C. A.

Week of prayer will be observed by the association every evening this week at 7:30; Sunday afternoon at 2:45, when a collection for the international work will be taken. All are cordially invited to come and bring their Gospel Hymns with them. Subject for to-night, by Dr. Roberts, "The Two Choices," Mark 10:17, Luke 5:27.

Lost: An Earring.

Five dollars will be paid to any person finding and leaving same at this office.

THE LATEST FROM NEW YORK.

Looks Exceedingly Favorable for Cleveland.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Nov. 12, '14.—Thirty-nine counties of the sixty in New York state are counted. They give Cleveland $30 additional plurality.

BETTING ON ELECTIONS.

One noticeable thing about the late election is the tremendous amount of betting. Of course if a man tells you he has bet $50 he means $5, but even with this discount off, it is evident that there has been a most unusual amount of money put up all over the country.

"Betting is no argument," is an expression one often hears. No one claims it to be an argument, but somehow when a man says that a thing is thus and so, and winds up with "I've got $20 that says so," one is apt to think twice before contradicting him.

The fact that there is a law against betting didn't seem to make any difference. Men voted just before betting and bet just before voting and didn't seem to care a continental that the law deprived them of the legal right to deposit a ballot and covered the amount of the bet as dividends into the treasury of the commonwealth. For once the statistics, in such cases made and provided were put entirely aside.

The bets, notably on New York, seemed to be a sort of political farcaster. The news that Nobbs had bet $10,000 that Blaine would carry New York, braced up the spines of the Plumed Knight's adherents far and near, while the intelligence that Nobbs had bet $10,000 that Cleveland would carry his own state, gladdened the hearts of the governor's adherents wherever it was heard.

The way the bets went did more than anything else to govern opinion as to the result. Every one realizes the truth of this in his own experience, for who is it that didn't feel increased confidence in the ability of his own candidate to succeed when he heard that some of his neighbors or acquaintances were putting up their coin as a backer to their opinions. Here in Astoria there is not a great deal bet, probably not over $5,000.

A Literary Diamond.

Sidney Smith says he cut the following from a newspaper and preserved it for his own guidance: "When you rise in the morning determine that you will make some person happy during the day. It is easily done. A left-off garment to some one who badly needs it; a kind word to the sorrowful; an encouraging expression to the dejected—trifles in themselves as light as air—will do at least for the twenty-four hours. If you are young it will tell when you are old; and if you are old it will help to smooth the road down to the bottom of the hill. By the most simple arithmetical calculation look at the result. Suppose you live forty years after you commence this course of medicine and you make one person a little happier than they could have been every day, that is 365 in a year, which multiplied by forty amounts to 14,600 persons which you have made happy—at all events—for a time."

THE WIVES OF THE PRESIDENTS.

Not Much Happiness for the Ladies of the White House.

When the American people proceed to elect a president they do not seem to trouble themselves very much about who his wife is, or what she is, or what his domestic relations are. Nothing could better illustrate the character of our political institutions than that every now and then a president's wife appears who has no social fitness whatever for the place she is expected to occupy. The wives of all the recent presidents except one, Mrs. Hayes, never would have been selected to occupy the position they were compelled to assume when they went to Washington. Mrs. Lincoln shrank from the ordeal—was never at ease while her husband was in the White House and never recovered from the sad effects of her sojourn there. Mrs. Andrew Johnson was a very plain little woman who loved her husband as she ought to have done, but who never had a taste for fashionable society. Mrs. Grant is one of the most faithful of wives, but her side of two presidential terms will be forgotten a long time before that of her husband. Mrs. Hayes was the first wife of a Republican president to carry any strong characteristics into her reign at the White House. She is a most amiable, intelligent lady, and is remembered with many more pleasant emotions than her husband. Mrs. Garfield was a loving wife and a good mother, but going to Washington came near being as fatal to her as to Garfield himself. She was as unused to the responsibilities of the position she had to assume as Mrs. Lincoln or Mrs. Andrew Johnson. President Arthur is more of a "society" man than any of his Republican predecessors, and if his wife had lived with him through his administration she would have been as highly esteemed by genteel people as the president himself is. She was a most lovable woman, and thoroughly familiar with polite usages. Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Garfield all married self-made men before they were made—that is, when they were young and poor and inconspicuous. They and their husbands were on a level where they married; they proceeded to raise up families of children, as all good wives should do, while their husbands proceeded to study and grow famous. After twenty years or so the husbands were charged with the responsibility of being presidents, but their wives were not ready to be mistresses of the White House. They had not been cultivating themselves in that direction. Mr. Lincoln married Mary Todd in 1842, when he was a poor lawyer at the little village of Springfield, capital of the then sparsely settled state of Illinois. That was nineteen years before he became president. Andrew Johnson came from over more humble surroundings than Abraham Lincoln. He was born in 1808 and married in 1827, so that he was only 19 when he assumed the responsibility of a wife. She taught him how to write and cipher, and was a good, patient, faithful woman. She had no desire to appear in the glare of Washington society during the time her husband was president, and her daughter, Mrs. Patterson, took the lead of the social side of the White House. Gen. Grant married Julia T. Dent, the daughter of a farmer, in 1848 and in 1852 he, after having become a captain in the army, went to live with her father on his farm near St. Louis. Mrs. Grant at that time lived a very humble life, her husband making part of his income by selling wood by the wagon-load in the streets of St. Louis. Afterwards he went to live with his own father, Gen. Grant, where he pursued the occupation of a tanner and leather dealer. He was there when the war broke out. The first ten years of his married life certainly gave him promise of good positions and honors, and Mrs. Grant never dreamed of preparing herself to go into the White House. Fame never fell upon a family more suddenly nor more unexpectedly. President Garfield was a teacher in a school. He was then thinking more of being a preacher than a politician, and his wife had no intimation of the cares and anxieties of the office. The overwhelming sorrow that awaited her as the first woman of the land. Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Garfield were devoted wives and mothers, and had no wish to leave their husbands for the White House. Still they and their husbands would many a time have been happier if the latter had had better opportunities in life.

The misfortunes of women who have been the wives of late presidents are remarkable. Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Garfield all became widows while at the White House, the two last under the most terrible circumstances. The first Mrs. Tyler died while her husband was president, and the second Mrs. Tyler, who is now living at Georgetown, D. C., was compelled to ask Congress for a pension in 1879. Ex-President John Tyler died at his home in January, 1862, and his property was destroyed by the war. Mrs. James K. Polk, who is yet living at the advanced age of 84, had a fortune left her and has long enjoyed the society of her circle of devoted friends, but the last days of her life have been much embittered by the disgraceful defalcation and subsequent imprisonment of her nephew, who was State treasurer.

Mrs. Tyler and Mrs. Polk are the only women now living who were wives of ante-bellum presidents, and it is rather odd that Mrs. Tyler is the younger of the two by twenty-five years, whereas her husband was president in 1843 and 1844, while Mr. Polk did not come into the office till later. Mrs. Tyler was not only a second wife, but was married at the early age of 18. She is the only presidential wife who had the honor of giving a wedding reception at the White House. There are at least two people in New York who danced at that reception—Henry Bergh and wife. There is no need to attempt to recount the misfortunes of Mrs. Lincoln and Mrs. Garfield, for they are well known to all the world. Poor Mr. Lincoln survived her husband a dozen years or more, but she never survived the shock that his death gave her, and the latter days of her life were clouded by a disordered mind. Few and far between were the happy moments that fell to her lot from the turbulent hours that her husband became President. The story of Mrs. Andrew Jackson is almost as pathetic, but it is not so well known. She was nearly 60 years old when her husband became president, and had been married over forty years. She was almost as little known at Washington during the presidential career of Andrew Johnson as if she had not lived at all, and the American people know less about her than of the wives of any of the chief executives of their country. She died in 1879, six months after her husband had died. Mrs. Grant is not by any means a happy woman, though she has the satisfaction of knowing that the American people will always hold her husband in the highest esteem for his great military services. The disaster that came on General Grant and her sons who were in business in the firm of Grant & Ward told very heavily upon her, and she, along with the other recent president's wives, has a burden to bear. Mrs. Hayes seems to be peacefully settled in life and lives quietly at a little village in Ohio.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Approach of the Gay Season.—Peculiarities of Life at the Capital.—The Short Term of Congress—President Arthur and his Reported Engagement.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4, 1884.

It is an odd fact that the best sign of the approach of the gay season in Washington is noticed at the auction sales. These competitive entertainments are very popular in this city and draw big crowds. They are especially diverting to certain classes of women who love a bargain as much as they do a bonnet, but they are also a source of excitement and interest to the very large number of people here, who eke out an income by renting rooms, or taking boarders. There is hardly a parallel in any other city of the country to this in this respect. A reasonable estimate would say that at least one-half of the domiciles of Washington are occupied by more than one family. The principal reason for this is found in the fact that incomes are usually small. A clerk with a salary of $1,000, $1,200 or $1,400 and an increasing family, cannot afford to rent a good house for their exclusive use. He solves the problem of how to live well on a small income, by sub-letting apartments in a large house the rent of which he assumes, but reduces the rent in this way very often so that his living rooms cost but a nominal sum. The unmarried clerks and clerks, and young couples, and visitors for "the season" make up his tenants. New as winter approaches and the city fills up with people, the vacant houses are taken and the problem of how to furnish rooms becomes an active one with this class. Hence the auction sales, and the customers. One would think that some time the second-hand furniture would fail to materialize and spread itself over the large rooms, and out into the street and mail cart up and down the block, but it is the case on auction days here; but it is always there. The half worn carpets and chairs, the faded settees and sofas, rheumatic tables and base bric-a-brac; all eloquently dumb about the things and events with which they have been associated, are on hand, and are eagerly bought and carted off to commence life over again in a sort of a way. It is wonderful where it all comes from, but it is a good illustration of how changeable an office-holding community is. There is an opportunity for an imaginative writer to trace the career of furniture from a cabinet-maker's to Duane's front parlor if he wants to. Such mutability appertains to Washington curios. But the subject is left for the romancer, with the assertion that the movement of old furniture is the first important sign of the coming of the gay season.

The second or short session of Congress is usually an important one. It meets in December, a large slice is cut out for the holidays, and it expires March 4. This leaves little chance for active business, and besides the house is practically disorganized. Those who have been defeated for the new term do not care to work. Their interest is dead. Those who are re-elected are busy with schemes for getting better committee places, and so the session is usually a trifling one. The laxity which prevails is, however, taken advantage of by the lobbyists. There are more steals carried through and more bad legislation is enacted. The salary grabs and special grants of all kinds have all passed on the eve of an expiring Congress. It always happens when the dominant party is in the majority in Congress that the lobbyists signalize their retirement to private life by gouging something from the treasury. This soothes the pangs of defeat and eases the pain which attends the overthrow of their ambitions.

Preparations are being made at the White House for a lively winter. The rumor which deified Mr. Arthur's marriage with Miss Frelinghuysen has been omitted by all who have tried the new remedy in question. It is almost absurd to deny the truth of such a rumor, but the two people most interested are often put in a most embarrassing attitude towards each other by it. This is the case in this instance without doubt. Their interest in each other was a little more than friendly, and the prospect of such an alliance could not have been distasteful to a lady of middle age. But the gossip of rude tongues has been doing almost as much as the leading physicians and druggists gladly welcome to the list of new remedies all preparations possessing real merit and a pleasant taste. It is now omitted by all who have tried the new remedy, which is having such an immense sale—Syrup of Figs—that it is the most agreeable and efficacious preparation ever discovered. If you want a cure of all Liver troubles and purgatives, Syrup of Figs is your choice. Trial bottles free and large bottles for sale by W. E. Dement.
